The Trial Justice system is very unsatisfactory in many particulars, but we need an inferior court with summary powers, and unless we had something better to offer we will not attempt to pull it down. In fact we believe if we could always get good men as Trial Justices, and men who understood something of the law, the present system, with a flew changes, would be about as good as any. We think, however, they should be salaried officers, and not have to depend at all upon the fees of the office. And the constables should be paid in the same way. It would remove a temptation, which, under the present system, is sometimes a stumbling block.

Sin-1 desire to express a few words in your popular journal. I spent three days in the Gate City during the mammoth Exposition that has recently made a record on the seroil of the Past. The exhibits of every species were superbly grand and magnificent. The huge enterprise certainly merits volumes of eulogy and reflects much credit upon the originators. The unprecedentedly immense originators. The unprecedentedly immense throng of humanity that witnessed it will originators. The unprecedentedly immense throng of humanity that it witnessed it will abundantly testify that it was not, by any means, a "one-horse affair." It will be a mot unent for thought, ever and anon to revert to, for many days to come. Peradventure, good will accrue from it in the way of creating stimulus to emulation in every branch of industry.

Also, the scribe hesitates not to assert, it is not exempt from from fault-finding, and is entitled to a large share of disapprobation. It certainly was fruitful of much evit-doing A stigma of reproach was visibly impressed upon Atlanta's supreme efforts to establish an unimpenehable epoch in her history of greatness. I am partial to the opinion the evil preponderates the good in such like ostenatious displays. The many ways that, apparently, are tolerated in the shape of gambing, to tempt many a poor fellow to lose his laborious carnings, are obnoxious features. The races afford an inviting tendency to recklessness and adventure in being made moneyless. The repeated assurances of the organ of constitution of that prosperous city that extortion and innostion would be unthat extortion and imposition would be under complete subjection, were not fully enjoyed. The numerous restaurants of drinkables and eddibles on "the grounds" were not averse to appreciating the advantage of the hungry condition of the visitors for the sake of "filthy lucre." For example: nickel for an egg, ten cents for a sandwich or a slice of cheese that would lodge very nicely on the dorsal proportions of an animalcule. Potations of disguised epithets commanded an extortionate outlay of "spondulicks." Prohibition, seemingly, was not on duty, enjoying a "noose" for the time being. Hotel keepers readily took in the situation, and caped a harvest of extortion unparalleled in the annals of history. Lodging was at a premium of over a hundred per cent, above par.

premium of over a hundred per cent, above par.

Perhaps the appointed vigilant committee resorted to every available means to operate against imposition, but, in my observation and experience, failed prodigiously. The merciless hand of extortion wrested many a hard-carned dollar from a number of persons. It especially exercised an untimited sway amongst hotel dignitaries. Give the devist his due. I learn the Kimball House only exacted $14 for a man and wife for one night. Many instances could be cited. Suffice the relation of my individual case, based upon indisputable facts. I cannot well resist to give vent to a feeling of revenge, however weak it may appear. My partner in life was in my charge. Undergoing a little trouble I secured quarters at the St. George's Hotel. It was very undesirable. Four flights of stafrway intervened firma terra ere reaching its lofty attitude. And the close proximity of a very effensive "sink" augmented its undesirable bedroom, with an extra cot wedged in. The clerk demanded extra charge for the cot, $1.25 per day, which I paid. He gave me no ticket. Early next norning we were off to the exposition. I retained the key and left our in minity are due, and are hereby publicly tendered to Col. Owing to our comparatively mild winter climate the Southern farmer is apt to neglect wholesome precautions against severe weather. In fact it is shameful how little thought or care is given on many farms to the comfort of the dumb and helpless animals who toil for us the year round, and are content with their wages, rations and shelter. Aslde from moral and humane considerations it is a question of dollars and cents that no farmer can afford to lenger. Theorem many formers where the content with their wages. It will be rememberd in this connection that we have often stressed the importance of getting the porkers into a condition for the knife before the cold weather has set in for the winter. Hogs should now be nearly or quite ready to kill, and advantages should be taken of the first cold spell the latter part of this month to commence operations. Christmas should find them all in the smoke-house and the first killings on the sticks. The best and cheapest bacon is that made from hogs well fattened and butchered in December or earlier.
